A barcode (also bar code) is an optical, machine-readable, representation of data; the data usually describes something about the object that carries the barcode. Traditional barcodes systematically represent data by varying the widths and spacings of parallel lines, and may be referred to as linear or one-dimensional (1D).

You bring up a very good point Duncan. Thanks for that. The only question that remains then from an architecting/design point of view is how big the impact of the queue depth would be. > 250 would suit well for small/regular workloads but is still a great difference (probably in price as well) then +1000.
