grammar in interaction adverbial pdf

In grammar, an adverbial (abbreviated adv) is a word (an adverb) or a group of words (an adverbial phrase or an adverbial clause) that modifies or more closely defines the sentence or the verb. (The word adverbial itself is also used as an adjective, meaning "having the same function as an adverb".) Look at the examples below: Danny speaks fluently. ...

Although some features of German grammar, such as the formation of some of the verb forms, resemble those of English, German grammar differs from that of English in that it has, among other things, cases and gender in nouns and a strict verb-second word order in main clauses. German has retained many of the grammatical distinctions that other Germanic languages have lost in whole or in part.

Hi Bob, The use of "ing forms was touched on in a previous question (see ' "ing forms and post modification '), but it's worth returning to, not least because your question raises interesting issues relating to word class and syntactic function.. The notion of word class (also called part of speech) is a convenient one for labelling purposes but tends to buckle under pressure.
